Segment 3: How does the SRC work?

Collaborate/Implement

Seek the support of your class's Student Representative Council member to work with the rest of the class to develop a decision-making flow chart. The flow chart needs to outline the process your school's SRC follows for making decisions, initiating change and taking action. All of the actions, steps and tasks need to be included, as well as who participates at each stage of the process. Display the finished products around the school to raise student awareness about the SRC's decision-making processes and to demonstrate an environment of openness and transparency.

You might like to complete this task using a visual thinking and learning tool such as Inspiration or SmartDraw.

A flow chart details the process or stages of a project or program. Typically a flow chart begins and ends with rounded rectangles to indicate the start and end points, has parallelograms to indicate decisions and actions, rectangles to indicate tasks and processing steps, and arrows to suggest the flow or sequence of events.
